Seminar - Opportunities and challenges in the use of systems approaches (SAs) as sustainable risk management tools for the future.

A systems approach (as defined in ISPM 5) refers to a pest risk management option that integrates different measures, at least two of which act independently, with cumulative effect. ISPM 14 is the international standard that provides guidance to develop systems approaches for different production systems. The recently adopted IPPC Strategic Framework (2020-2030), under its strategic objective to “enhance global food security and increase sustainable agricultural productivity” calls for IPPC contracting parties to ensure that sustainable pest risk management options, such as systems approaches, are implemented to minimize pest impacts through the plant production process thereby minimizing the need for end-point treatments.

Systems approaches offer additional flexibility and opportunities to employ equivalent measures as alternatives to single measures and facilitate risk management when effective single measures may not exist. In a world that is looking for risk management options that are scientifically sound but also environmentally and cost friendly, systems approaches may offer practical alternatives, especially as the use of other available tools is phased out.

The Seminar seeks to build on industry and NPPO experiences and best practices on systems approaches as sustainable risk management tools for the future. It will highlight case studies with systems approaches in NAPPO countries, review their benefits and challenges, and explore the future of systems approaches.

The Seminar will:

- ❖ Discuss the international framework for systems approaches and its harmonization value
- ❖ Feature existing systems approach programs and discuss their benefits and challenges
- ❖ Discuss the intersection between systems approaches and the strength of measures concept
- ❖ Present industry experiences and best practices in relation to systems approaches
- ❖ Examine the future of systems approaches
